Law 301-HA Seminar: Religious Freedom: Comparative and International Perspectives (honors)

(Cr. 2)(Fall) Prof. Zachary Calo

This course considers the relationship between law and religion from a comparative and international perspective, with particular attention given to issue of religious freedom. The course begins by examining the intellectual history of religious freedom. We will study seminal primary source documents, particularly from the Anglo-American tradition. We will then consider the contemporary treatment of religion in various national legal systems, focusing on the United States, China, and select countries in South America and Europe. The course next addresses the status of religious freedom within international law. In addition to looking at relevant international declarations and covenants, we will study issues from regional regimes such as the European Court of Human Rights and the Inter-American Court of Human Rights, as well as the United States Commission on International Freedom. The course concludes by considering a number of case studies implicating religion and religious freedom such as proselytism, blasphemy laws, headscarves, education, gender, family law, hate speech, and legal pluralism.

Law 452-A Shakespeare and the Law (Cr.2)(Summer 2011) Prof. Clare Nuechterlein

This course is designed to teach upper level legal analytical thinking and writing for the bar exam and for the practice of law. Students will sharpen their analytical and written skills through a review of selected topics within major multistate bar exam subjects. Students will become familiar with multiple choice test taking and will learn both strategy and substance through doing so. This is a skills-development course that provides students with test taking skills using selected legal material routinely tested on the bar exam. Through the use of problems and exercises in a bar exam format, students will become familiar with techniques for answering multiple choice questions from the MBA (Multistate Bar Examination), Model Professional Test, and the Indiana Essay portion of the bar exam, as well as analyzing, organizing, and writing essay questions. Please note that this course is not a substitute for any commercial bar prep course such as Bar/Bri or PMBR. Students are strongly encouraged to use a commercial review course.
