As the COVID-19 virus crisis continues, the University must move to our next phase of planning as to how to fulfill our mission in our ever-changing reality. Central to this planning is to consider the various possibilities of how and when fall instruction will begin and the implications that these various models will have on student affairs related areas on campus. This group would examine the implications or areas various modes of delivery would have on the student affairs functions of the university, including but not limited to housing, student involvement, athletics, mission and ministry and student employment. The group will provide considerations for each scenario and recommendations for how best to support students in each learning environment.
